ELECTION NIGHT THROUG GATHERED IN TIMES SQUARE, NEW YORK

Election night crowds always assemble in large numbers in Times Square, New York. The city election is almost as important in the metropolis as a Presidential contest, and in this election the campaign grew so hot that the interest was intense on all sides. All the restaurants in the vicinity of Forty-second street and Broadway are packed from early evening until after midnight on election night, returns being flashed on bulletin boards at many places in that section of the city. This photograph shows the New York Times' searchlight in operation and a steno-graphic bulletin board surrounded by a throng of people. The view is from south on Broadway at the intersection of Seventh avenue.

Blind Deer Killed.

A blind deer that has been wandering aimlessly about the woods in Lanesville, the past two or three weeks, stumbling against trees and tearing itself on barbed wire fences, was put out of its trouble Sunday by a bullet. It had received a dose of bird shot in the head, some of the shot having entered its eyes and destroyed the sight, but otherwise not injuring it. When finally shot, the deer was madly running around a circle in a lot put out by two or three dogs. It would tear ahead until it struck the wire fence, bound off at a tangent, only to return shortly after to the same place, as was killed by order of the Game Warden.

Damage Case Settled.

The case of William Doyle vs. the Coe Brass company, both of Torrington, Conn., the attention of Judge Wheeler and a jury in the superior court Tuesday morning, but was withdrawn at the opening of the afternoon session, a settlement having been effected. The action was for $3,500 damages for the loss of a finger.
